LOCALETS

Miss Ambler has resigned from the staff of the Lomond Consolidated Schools. The Board have advertised for applications to be in by May 12th.

Ira Donily's house was put under quarantine this week for chicken pox. The disease appears to be of a very mild type but it is well to take precautions to prevent its spreading.

The Red Cross ladies will hold their final tea for this season tomorrow (Saturday) evening, at Mrs. Crum's restaurant.

Geo. Hoadley, M. P. P., of Okotoks, who is running a large bunch of horses on the South Alberta Land Co. lease east of Lomond, was over last week looking after affairs in general.

L. M. Swain enjoyed a short visit last week from his brother, recently of Viscount, Sask.

S. A. Beckett has just completed a job of painting on the Adams residence.

Leroy N. Hastings who is doing contracting and building in Travers made the Press a pleasant call Wednesday evening.

Berg Ellingson, general salesman for the Assiniboia Music Co., Medicine Hat, has been spending the past few days in the Lomond district.

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Greenfield and daughter, of Enchant, Bob Greenfield and Allen Harris, of Ratlaw, and Mrs. J. G. Allingham, of Gadsby, motored into Lomond Sunday evening on a sightseeing tour. They were well impressed by the Lomond district.

W. H. Smith is sporting around in Calgary this week.

Mr. Bletcher, manager of the Lethbridge branch of the Standard Bank, called in Lomond on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Elves were in Calgary for a few days this week.

The wheat market is back in form again, Lomond street prices today being $2.25.

V. Baker and Geo. Mullen are away to Calgary this week.

Eli Blake has returned home after a prolonged stay in the Southern States brought about through a development of a severe attack of appendicitis. Mr. Blake states that the wheat crops down south are more than a fifty per cent failure. Much of the land is being plowed up and re-seeded into spring crops.

Binder Twine Goes Up

Binder twine quotations coming out this week brought the conditions of the market home to the farmers in an effective manner. Twine shows about a fifty per cent advance over last year.

With wheat up more than a hundred per cent, it does not mean a matter of hardship.

GOOD ROADS! WE NEED THEM

Hon. Jas. McNaughton, M. P. P., was in Lomond last night, together with Mr. Ainsworth, superintendent of government road work in Southern Alberta, and, leaving all political feeling aside, if we don't have good roads this summer on the trunk lines leading into town, we cannot blame the government.

Mr. McNaughton states that in organized municipalities such as this, the government does not feel itself responsible for anything but trunk lines, but on main roads is prepared to provide a completely equipped outfit in charge of an experienced man and then will pay dollar for dollar with the municipality on the expense of operation. But, the farmers must themselves provide the horses and labor, and for which they will be allowed $6.00 per day for a man and team.

We all realize, this work has to be done. The farmer will derive the greatest benefit therefore he should be willing to place his outfit at the disposal of road construction for a short period at least. He will be paid fair wages for his work and will then have a fit road to market.

From now on the matter is plainly up to the municipal council. We trust their intentions are good. The government is prepared to go halves, surely they will take advantage of this offer.

Wheat Seeding In The Lomond District Nearly Finished

Practically all wheat seeding in this district is now completed. There are thousands of acres of splendid summer-fallow land and a very small percentage of stubbling. The Lomond farmers have apparently learned that good farming pays best. The weather has been slightly backward, but work is not as late as some other years we have known. There is an abundance of moisture in the ground and so far in the air too. The area in crop this year is perhaps twenty-five per cent greater than last year. No serious labor shortage has been reported, still we know where a few good men could have been readily utilized if they had been available. We are often led to day-dream into the possibilities of this country. Just now there is scarcely one quarter of this part of the country under cultivation. As the development goes on, what a tremendous producing power this will be. We are glad to relate that this district has never experienced a "speculative" boom and we hope same, conservative business axioms will continue as the farmer's ideals.

The Good Samaritans We Meet On The Firing Line

"Mine was a head wound, and I was able to walk in a fashion, for at first I was quite conscious though rather shaken," writes a wounded soldier. When every trench has its complement of victims, livid with ghastly wounds, "walking wounded" is a very comprehensive term.

"My own people brought me down to the dressing-station, where the horse ambulances were waiting. But there the doctors implored me, if I could manage to struggle along on foot, to make my own way to the clearing station. They pointed to the waiting ambulance already full up with unconscious men on stretchers, to the long lines of stretchers on the ground surrounding them.

"So I started to hobble on alone. Suddenly I found another officer beside me, a second lieutenant like myself. How he got there or where he came from I do not know, but he had been shot through the leg and found walking very painful. So we joined forces, and, putting arms around one another's neck, hopped along like a pair in a three-legged race. Then, from a shell-hole on that corpse-strawn Ginchy slope, I heard a loud "Pat!"

"A battered old sapper was beckoning to us. I can see him now, with his wrinkled old face and his dirty cap and grizzled hair, leaning out of his shell-hole, with the smoke of a little fire wreathed about him.

"Would you like a drfp o' nice hot tea, sir?" ee said. Would we? The next moment we were setting on the edge of the shell-hole drinking hot tea out of mess tins. I must have drunk a pint of it—it was the best drink I had ever had.

"I had no cigarettes to offer the good Samaritan, but the old boy smoked a pipe, and his eyes gleamed as I emptied a pouchful of my best tobacco into his grimy hand. Then I left him at his work of mercy, a valiant figure, anonymous, humble whom I shall never forget.

"I resumed my pilgrimage alone, for the other officer had vanished—how and where I do not know now—a wounded man forgets so much. But a hundred yards further on, when I was feeling very near the limit of my endurance, I fell in with a mess waiter of my own battalion, who forthwith took charge of me with the solicitude of a mother.

"He put his arm around my waist and supported me to a shell-hole where the mess things were, including whiskey and Perrier; he chatted brightly about a thousand inconsequential things to keep my spirit up, and it was he who stopped the gunner's water-cart and asked the driver to give me a lift. He made a seat of sandbags on the shaft and lifted me into it himself, bidding me "Good luck!" as we jogged away. Him I shall never see to thank more coherently than I could then, for a shell killed him that same night—a gentle, kindly man.

"Next on my list comes the gunner who drove the water-cart . . . he kept the horse at a walking pace to save my aching head, and he drove a good five miles out of his way to drop me at a clearing station. No walking wounded case who claimed a lift from that driver appealed in vain, until there was not a vacant space left on tank or limber. I often think I should like to meet that man again.

"At the casualty clearing station there was a boy doctor with glasses, who changed my bandage and gave me a soft chair and hot soup and all the cigarettes in his case, and was charmingly affable, though he had been working for twelve hours without intermission. He told me his name and hospital but I have forgotten both . . . but I have a mental photograph of his cheery face and great goggles, and some day, perhaps we shall meet in London, and then the entertainment will be "on me."

"After that impressions grew hazy, and faces and names and surroundings all faded away. But there was a young Grenadier private who took charge of me when my senses were failing, and I can remember his arm about my waist as he led me gently into some kind of a field ambulance where there was a very shadowy R. A. M. C. orderly with a very pronounced Dublin accent . . . but I shall never forget their personalities. No doubt if their hour, or the hour of any other good Samaritans in this narrative, comes in this war, what they do to a humble lieutenant will be remembered. May to them be done even as they did!"

Progress and Stability Your Protection

ARE YOU going to give us that meeting? That face to face meeting, that is necessary to convince you that we give better value than mail order houses. It takes so little to destroy an illusion, that we look with an experienced eye, for quality and value turns the balance in favor of dealing at the home store,—THERE IS NO PLACE LIKE HOME. In Millinery and Ready-to-Wear goods, we have the advantage of being able to fit the customer with any goods desired. If the size is not in stock, we make it to your measure, either for men, for women, or for children.

THE CATALOGUE IS FORGOTTEN

And has ceased to be the medium of trade to those who do not wish to have their clothing look like the proverbial hand-me-down. Mail order houses sell "missfits" and any old, odd thing that can be got at a low price, then you see the picture,—every picture tells a story,—it is like looking at a doughnut, some people only see the hole, when your hat does not become you—or the garment does not fit—you feel as if you had paid for the hole—after you have paid your money and waited weeks, and in some cases months for the goods to arrive, than you have to send them back, is another picture, but tells a different story. This is the time we show you the real value of the HOME STORE. And when our efforts to please you are appreciated, and our experience your guide in the future, The Name,

WHAT WOULD THE TOWN BE LIKE IFF
WE HAD NO STORE

Have you ever stopped to think what a queer town this would be—how inconvenient for you—if there were no stores here? Without the stores there couldn't even be a town. Well, the only way to make stores possible is to give them patronage.

We are not loosing our heads over the mail-order danger, nor do we think it one of the seven deadly sins to buy something out of town occasionally. But we do maintain that every citizen of Lomond should make it his or her practise to buy of the merchants who are helping to pay our taxes, who are employing our own friends and neighbors, who are building up the town, who are indirectly making it possible for all of us to make our living!

We are gratified to learn that one of the great national magazines, and the greatest in the women's field, has decided to exclude all mail-order advertising from its columns and thus cooperate with local merchants everywhere. That this is a proper step can be seen by looking at the facts. The magazine mentioned, The Delineator, is sold locally through Marshall & Wilson, who also sell many of the goods advertised in its columns. Naturally, the store owners prefer that the advertising which they promote shall help them, which is only fair. The Delineator recognizes this, and, in spite of a loss in revenue amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars, has made the sacrifice in the interests of local dealers.

But the issue is broader than this. A store such as Marshall & Wilson's is a convenience and a credit to Lomond—we might even say a necessity. Now if we should divert a part of our trade to far-distant concerns, Marshall & Wilson would be obliged to carry only a meager stock, and would have to realize far bigger profits on the things we had to buy there. So we congratulate Marshall & Wilson and The Delineator on its recent move, which recognizes that, in a broad way, retail stores are the logical channels for distributing goods and that to "trade at home" promotes the best interests of all. You can do your part to help this town by giving your preference to those merchants who show an interest in the town and to that magazine which is trying to help us rather than undermine us.

Lloyd George Reviews Situation

Premier Lloyd George discussed the military situation, the Irish question and other major problems with the government is now engaged in a speech today at the Guildhall in acknowledgment of the conferring on him of the freedom of the city of London, the premier said:

"We must convert Ireland from a suspicious, dangerous neighbor to a cheerful, loyal comrade. Settlement of the Irish question is essential for the peace of the world and essential to a speedy victory in the war. I appeal to the patriotism of all men to sink everything for the one purpose of getting this question out of the way."

Lloyd George paid a tribute to the financial community through the help of which, he said, British credit had survived the financial panic of the early days of the war. This community, he said, took an honorable and leading part in the triumph of the last war loan, which was the most remarkable financial exploit ever witnessed. After alluding to the organization of the ministry of munitions, the premier said:

"Now, thank God, our men have a real chance in the fight. The story now is very different from what it was in the early stages of the war. Before June, 1915, we lost 84 guns and a considerable number of prisoners. Since that date we have not lost a single gun while we have captured 400. Regarding prisoners, we have taken at least ten to one. The tide has now turned. Victory is coming increasingly nearer.

"During the first eighteen days of the Somme battle we captured 1,100 prisoners and 84 guns. During the first eighteen days of the Arras battle our captures were 18,000 men and 230 guns, while we gained four times as much ground. This meant not only ultimate victory; it meant victory is going to be won at less loss and our chances are growing as our equipment is improving, and the Germans know it. This is the explanation of the despair which has driven them to black piracy on the high seas.

"This is the next job we have to deal with: Our maximum problem is to feed a population of 45,000,000 in a country which is not self-supporting, to provide necessary material and food to equip our armies and keep the seas free for the transport of the troops of ourselves and our allies. That has to be done against the swarms of pirates moving unseen under the trackless seas, since the Germans determined to sink all craft indiscriminately without warning. There is no doubt we have lost many ships, but they brought America in, and I am perfectly satisfied with the balance. America, after great patience, came to the conclusion there was no use of waving a neutral flag in the teeth of a shark, and she is definitely with us to put down this menace once for all.

"The best brains of America and Britain are concentrated on this problem. There was never a human problem which was not soluble, and I don't believe this is an exception to the rule, but we must proceed on the assumption that nothing could be discovered to put it down, and that is where the public comes in."
